What is a primary source?
Primary sources provide firsthand accounts or direct evidence about a particular event or person. To identify a primary source, ask yourself if it was produced by the person you are researching or during a particular event you are researching.

Examples of Primary Sources -
- original historical and legal documents
- items written by the person in question (diary entries, journal entries, letters, etc.)
- speeches
- interviews and oral histories
- birth, death, or marriage certificates
- photographs
- artifacts
- artforms created or written by the person in question
- original data or research
- sometimes newspaper articles
  - if the reporter witnesses the event firsthand or quotes someone who did

Historians use primary sources for research. Like detectives, historians use primary sources as clues and sift through evidence to form conclusions about a particular topic. Primary sources are crucial to the study of history because they provide tangible links to the past. Examining primary sources gives students a sense of history and the complexity of the past.

What is a Secondary Source?
Secondary sources interpret, describe, discuss, analyze, or summarize primary sources and other secondary sources. Authors of secondary sources form conclusions based on their evaluation of primary sources.

Examples of Secondary Sources -
- academic or scholarly books
- journal or magazine articles
- reviews
- newspaper articles

W.11-12.6 Gather relevant information from multiple authoritative print and digital sources, using advanced searches effectively; assess the strengths and limitations of each source in terms of the task, purpose, and audience; integrate information into the text selectively to maintain the flow of ideas, avoiding plagiarism and over reliance on any one source and following a standard format for citation.

SL.11-12.4 Present information, findings, and supporting evidence, conveying a clear and distinct perspective, such that listeners can follow the line of reasoning, alternative or opposing perspectives are addressed, and the organization, development, substance, and style are appropriate to purpose, audience, and a range of formal and informal tasks.
C3 FRAMEWORK STANDARDS (History)

ELEMENTARY

D2.His.3.K-2. Generate questions about individuals and groups who have shaped a significant historical change.
D2.His.3.3-5. Generate questions about individuals and groups who have shaped significant historical changes and continuities.
D2.His.4.3-5. Explain why individuals and groups during the same historical period differed in their perspectives.
D2.His.6.3-5. Describe how people’s perspectives shaped the historical sources they created.
D2.His.9.3-5. Summarize how different kinds of historical sources are used to explain events in the past.
D2.His.10.K-2. Explain how historical sources can be used to study the past.
D2.His.10.3-5. Compare information provided by different historical sources about the past.
D2.His.11.K-2. Identify the maker, date, and place of origin for a historical source from information within the source itself.
D2.His.11.3-5. Infer the intended audience and purpose of a historical source from information within the source itself.
D2.His.12.K-2. Generate questions about a particular historical source as it relates to a particular historical event or development.
D2.His.12.3-5. Generate questions about multiple historical sources and their relationships to particular historical events and developments.
D2.His.13.3-5. Use information about a historical source, including the maker, date, place of origin, intended audience, and purpose to judge the extent to which the source is useful for studying a particular topic.
D2.His.16.K-2. Select which reasons might be more likely than others to explain a historical event or development.
D2.His.16.3-5. Use evidence to develop a claim about the past.

MIDDLE

D2.His.3.6-8. Use questions generated about individuals and groups to analyze why they, and the developments they shaped, are seen as historically significant.
D2.His.4.6-8. Analyze multiple factors that influenced the perspectives of people during different historical eras.
D2.His.6.6-8. Analyze how people’s perspectives influenced what information is available in the historical sources they created.

D2.His.9.6-8. Classify the kinds of historical sources used in a secondary interpretation.

D2.His.10.6-8. Detect possible limitations in the historical record based on evidence collected from different kinds of historical sources.

D2.His.11.6-8. Use other historical sources to infer a plausible maker, date, place of origin, and intended audience for historical sources where this information is not easily identified.

D2.His.12.6-8. Use questions generated about multiple historical sources to identify further areas of inquiry and additional sources.

D2.His.13.6-8. Evaluate the relevancy and utility of a historical source based on information such as maker, date, place of origin, intended audience, and purpose.

D2.His.16.6-8. Organize applicable evidence into a coherent argument about the past.

SECONDARY

D2.His.3.9-12. Use questions generated about individuals and groups to assess how the significance of their actions changes over time and is shaped by the historical context.

D2.His.4.9-12. Analyze complex and interacting factors that influenced the perspectives of people during different historical eras.

D2.His.6.9-12. Analyze the ways in which the perspectives of those writing history shaped the history that they produced.

D2.His.8.9-12. Analyze how current interpretations of the past are limited by the extent to which available historical sources represent perspectives of people at the time.

D2.His.9.9-12. Analyze the relationship between historical sources and the secondary interpretations made from them.

D2.His.10.9-12. Detect possible limitations in various kinds of historical evidence and differing secondary interpretations.

D2.His.11.9-12. Critique the usefulness of historical sources for a specific historical inquiry based on their maker, date, place of origin, intended audience, and purpose.

D2.His.12.9-12. Use questions generated about multiple historical sources to pursue further inquiry and investigate additional sources.

D2.His.13.9-12. Critique the appropriateness of the historical sources used in a secondary interpretation.

D2.His.16.9-12. Integrate evidence from multiple relevant historical sources and interpretations into a reasoned argument about the past.
Wax Museum Description

Grades:
1st - 5th

Description:
Using materials provided in the Traveling Trunk, students will research a historical figure from the Swannanoa Valley and Asheville area. Students will then write a report about their historical figure. The report may include details about their figure’s childhood, family, life, and accomplishments. They can create a speech from their report. On the day of the Wax Museum, students will dress up as their chosen figure. They will assemble around the classroom or museum and stand still as if they are a statue. They should have a “button” drawn on their hand or on the floor. Visitors will walk around to each student, and when they press that student’s button, the student will “come to life” and give a one-minute speech as the historical figure they are impersonating.
Wax Museum Research

Reader’s Theater Description

Grades:
3rd - 5th

Description:
Using materials provided in the box, students will choose or be assigned a historical figure from the Swannanoa Valley and Asheville area. Students will get into groups with their classmates who have historical figures from the same time period (1700’s, 1800’s, 1900’s). Students will be given worksheets that will help them discuss their historical figures. They will then brainstorm with their group and together write a story or script that involves their historical figures which they will later perform.
Reader’s Theater

Break into groups with classmates from the same time period as you (1700’s, 1800’s, 1900’s). Tell your group members about your historical person. As a group, discuss what is similar and different about your people and answer the following questions:

❖ How are your historical people similar?

➢ Did your person have a similar job or skill to someone else in the group?

➢ Did your person have similar goals to someone else in the group?

➢ Note any other similarities:

❖ How are your historical people different?

➢ What makes your person unique (different from everyone else)?
➢ Note any other differences:

➢ Is there anyone else in the group that you think your person would have been good friends with? Why?

➢ Is there anyone else in the group that you think your person would not have gotten along with? Why?

Using the information you have discussed with your group members, write a story or a script involving your historical people. Be creative, but try to make the story realistic.

Digital Research Project Description

Grades:
6 - 12

Description:
Using the materials provided in the SVM Biography Box, students can begin researching notable individuals from the Swannanoa Valley and Asheville area. Students can present their research using a variety of digital platforms, and they have the opportunity to add images, video clips, text, and music to their presentations. Students should include details about their chosen/assigned individual's childhood, family, life, and accomplishments, as well as details about their research methods. Students can use the following digital platforms to present their findings:

- Google Slides
  - Like a powerpoint, allows students to create a slideshow with photos, text and basic animation.

- ArcGis Story Maps
  - Allows students to create dynamic online “digital exhibits” using web pages, maps, youtube videos, and more in a side by side high resolution format.

- Prezi
  - Not your average presentation, Prezi is ultra-customizable with an abundance of options for fonts and layouts. Can include videos, music and more.

- Microsoft Sway
  - Powerpoint 2.0. Manipulate photos and video like never before. Especially great for presenting “before and after” photos.

- Animoto
  - A cloud-based video creation service that produces video from photos, video clips, and music into video slideshows.

- ThingLink
  - Image interaction technology that helps students become fluent in using digital media to express themselves and demonstrate their learning. Allows students to annotate images.
Digital Storytelling

Using the materials provided in the SVM biography box, students can create a story chronicling the life and events of their historical figure. Digital storytelling is a method in which students can express themselves creatively in addition to developing digital media literacy skills. Digital history storytelling can help present a story about the past in a unique way. Students will be expected to consider the line between fiction and historical accounts. Students will explore ways in which storytellers use sound, images, text, color, font sizes and other creative mediums to serve the narrative.

Beginning story elements:
- Basic information presented to set the scene for the story.
- Introduction of the main character.
- A journey or a process of inquiry has begun. A problem or challenge, which the main character must solve, is established.

Middle elements:
- The full extent of the problem or conflict is made apparent.
- In the process of discovering a solution, the main character experiences growth and transformation.

Ending elements:
- Closure and conclusion.
- The transformation and growth of the character is highlighted.

Before digitally developing the story, students should first map out the direction they intend the narrative to take with the use of a storyboard. The narrative should be driven by historical information. In the storyboard, students should include the images, audio, and text they intend to include in their digital story.
Genealogy Research Guide Description

Grades:
9 - 12

Description:
Using the information gathered from the SVM biography box, students can search an online database to discover more information about their historical figure. Students have the ability to access HeritageQuest with the use of a Buncombe County library account. HeritageQuest offers a variety of genealogical sources for research use, such as census records, military records, cemeteries, and more. NCGenWeb also offers similar databases. Students should attempt to find as much additional information about their historical figure as possible using the online search tools and records. Students should also look for documents to support basic facts about their figure, such as birth and death dates and locations.

This project can be used as an introduction to family genealogical research. Students can use the same research guide worksheet (below) when researching their family history.

NCGenWeb: http://ncgenweb.us/nc/buncombe/
Research Guide Worksheet

Using the online database, find the following information about your historical figure. Include where you found the information (birth certificate, census records, obituary, etc.)

Full name of historical figure:

Birth date and location:

Death date and location:

Occupation:

Family members (parents, siblings, spouse, children):

Additional information found:
